

for what it's worth

Take a look around the room
The world seems to be doomed
I couldn't help but notice
My heart seems to be full of emptiness
I stare out my window
I see people lose their minds
I wish that I could know
The status of the times
For what it's worth
And all it's left behind
But I don't
But then I realize

That if we want this world to change
Stop pointing a finger at whose to blame
And just change it
I'd write it all up across the wall
If there's a man upstairs
Can he heed the call
But I don't know.
I don't know
If we band together
We can answer people's cries
I know it's not forever
But superheroes
They don't rise
For all I know
They're just a bunch of lies
But this I do know
If we want this world to change
We have to change ourselves

When I look in the mirror
My eyes are swollen dry
The message seemed clearer now
I have to come to terms with who am I
I stare at my window
Think about you from time to time
I wish that I could know
The state of my mind
And for what it's worth
I know I'm wrong sometimes
I'm sorry
I've got to realize

That if I want my life to change
I have to change myself more than anything
So I can fix this
I wrote a letter to all my friends
Talking like I'd never see them again
I miss them
And I know
That I've got some problems
Lord knows I've made mistakes
I hope to fall in love
But there's things that I can't take
About myself
And that's alright with me
But this I do know
If I want my life to change
I have to change myself

When I look out the window
I hope to see the future dance above the sky
Cause today
I realized
This world has got to some work to do
But maybe so do I
